Task force multipliers

Truth proposes list of nurses for inclusion on Biden-Harris coronavirus task force

The Truth About Nursing sent the Covid task force a message with a diverse list of nurses. The list included direct care nurses, as well as nurses who are expert in infection control, health disparities, and other public health disciplines. We hope our message will increase understanding of nursing. While we can't guarantee nurses will be added to the task force, we are hopeful, and we thank you for your recommendations!

November 22, 2020 - Today the Truth About Nursing proposed a list of nurse experts for potential inclusion on the Biden-Harris coronavirus task force to the Truth's contact on the current 13-member advisory panel. Our contact agreed to work with us as a result of our letter-writing campaign, which gathered more than 750 signatures. We thank the many nurses and organizations who supported that effort and recommended nurse experts for our list. We created the list based mainly on those recommendations, as well as on our advocacy work and Truth director Sandy Summers's clinical experience providing ICU and other care to Covid-19 patients. Supporters proposed so many highly qualified nurses that narrowing the list was very difficult, and we were only able to include about a small number of the total nominees on the final list we submitted. Even so, the list was extensive. We proposed more than 20 nurses for the current task force, and 6 more who are currently in government and might be added after Inauguration Day. In our transmittal message, we explained how each nurse would aid the task force, including through their expertise in infection control; health care disparities; clinical nursing environments; occupational health; rural health; mental health; palliative care; pain management; school nursing; vaccine hesitancy and health literacy; and ethical issues in the allocation of health resources. We included direct care nurses and their advocates. And half of those we proposed were Black, Indigenous, or Persons of Color. The Truth undertook this campaign not just to address Covid-19, but also to advance our mission to increase understanding of nursing among high-level decision-makers and the public. We hope our message to the task force, including the list of nurse experts, shows the importance and wide range of nursing practice. Finally, we should stress that we have no guarantee that any nurses will be added to the panel. But we are hopeful, and we will let you know if we hear more. Thank you for your help!

Sandy Summers gave an online presentation for the University of Sheffield October 19

On October 19, 2020, Truth About Nursing founder and director Sandy Summers appeared online as part of a University of Sheffield program to answer the question, "What are the best ways of informing and engaging the public about nursing"? This is part of a consensus development project of the Strategic Research Alliance, a joint effort of the University of Sheffield and The Royal College of Nursing, which aims to address the five most important questions facing nursing in the UK. Nurses presented their findings to a lay panel to initiate public policy changes, with the ultimate goal of strengthening UK nursing care. We will let you know when the presentation is archived. Stay tuned!

How can nurses become fierce advocates?

Sandy Summers delivered an empowering message to new graduates at graduation speech at Widener University's Nightingale ceremony last week

In a short, compelling address, Sandy Summers welcomes new graduates to the field of nursing and inspires them to become fierce patient advocates--to put patients' interests first. Sandy explains her holistic vision of nursing advocacy and shares strategies to help nurses find their voices. She highlights areas in need of our advocacy and offers perspectives on how to overcome the resistance we meet when we challenge the world to do better. Nursing advocacy saves lives, and our patients need us to do it. So please join Sandy and let's get started!

Professors

Planning your curriculum?

We have ideas

Many nursing professors rely on the extensive and varied materials on the Truth's website to help their students engage with critical issues nurses will face in the future, from their public image to key aspects of nursing education, practice, and advocacy. Since 2001, we have explored and analyzed how the global media and society in general has seen the nursing profession. Join your colleagues and use this material to help plan your curriculum! Think about the future

New international text Nurses and Nursing leads off with chapter by Truth leaders

The exciting new textbook Nurses and Nursing: The Person and the Profession includes a chapter on nursing's image by Truth leaders Sandy Summers and Harry Jacobs Summers. Edited by Padraig O Luanaigh, RN, EdD, the thought-provoking new textbook from Routledge "draws on international contributors with a range of backgrounds to explore, engage with and challenge readers in understanding the many aspects and elements that inform and influence contemporary nursing practice." Our chapter is "Nursing's public image: Toward a professional future." We thank Dr. Luanaigh for the opportunity to be a part of this important new project. Please consider this book for your classes in professionalism, nursing and society, and nursing leadership.
